

Save the Mohican Complex

Whatever Ohioans decide about fracking, one must come to the conclusion industrial sites have no place in our Ohio State Parks.

Mohican State Park, Mohican State Forest and Malabar Farm State Park are presently at risk of losing their old-growth wilderness charms as large chunks of them are cleared for drilling rigs, or simply logged away and sold for lumber.

We ask you to refrain from timbering, fracking or drilling for oil or gas in Mohican State Park, State Forest, or Malabar Farm. These state lands amount to only 10 square miles, yet they are of incomparable value for recreation and the appreciation of nature. Please save these state parks and the state forest in their current condition for future generations. Their long-term value as a refuge for those who appreciate nature and as a tourist destination in our area, far exceeds the money from timbering or fracking.
